Lost in Translation

“SORRY” Explained!

A couple of people were confused why Ayumu was so affected by Toujou's "Sorry" when Ayumu said "Sorry" first. Technically Ayumu said "Sumimasen". The scene before this shows Toujou wiping Ayumu's drool off. Toujou being a superior and given the unexpected kiss, Ayumu panicked and instinctively apologizes for Toujou wiping off his drool (bringing his hand up to cover his mouth), but he was so flustered about the kiss that he questioned why he apologized. Toujou, on the other hand, said "Warakatta". He is also apologizing, but in this sense, he is indicating that what happened was a mistake; that it is his fault. Something similar to "My bad", but we didn't want to use this term as it felt rude for someone of Toujou's personality. Ayumu perceived this as a form of pity taking into account his monologue in the park, where he realizes (on top of Toujou's marriage condition), that kissing Ayumu was a mistake and therefore Ayumu not being the one meant for him.
